FIDDLERS TO-NIGHT.

Long Looked For Date at Hand
And Big Time Ahead.

Many Visitors Already in Town
And The Various Contests
Will be Lively.

The Old Fiddlers' Contest at the Tabernacle to-night, in spite of the unfavorable weather most of this week, bids fair to surpass even the expectations of the promoters. A large number of advance seats have been sold and the crowd is expected to be tremendous. Fortunately the big Tabernacle contains room enough for all and a crowd of even 4,000 can be comfortably seated. A delegation from McKeune, Tenn., and other points in that state, arrived last night.

The Clarksville people will arrive at 9:30 this morning and every incoming train to day will swell the crowd in the city.

The visiting Judges, H. H. Holman, of Madisonville; Jack R. Wylie, of Princeton, and W. W. Barksdale, of Clarksville, will stop with friends in the city. Most of the performers from a distance will be quartered at the Phoenix Hotel, which will be "Fiddlers' Headquarters." The Tabernacle decorations were all put in place yesterday and the public will be treated to an agreeable surprise in the novelty and taste displayed in the arrangements.

ARMS BOUND

And Victim Thrown Into a Blazing Fire.

Lunatic Makes a Desperate Effort to Burn His Mother to Death.

Roy Courtney, a lunatic, attempted to kill his mother, widow of the late J. M. Courtney, near Concord, Wednesday. Young Courtney was sent to the asylum in 1899, and in August last was turned out of the institution on parole. Since that time he had been making his home with his mother and it was thought that his mind had been fully restored. A few days ago, however, he again displayed symptoms of lunacy. On Wednesday he suddenly became violent and seizing his mother, he beat her arms with a rope, and dragging her across the room, threw her into the fire. Her screams attracted other members of the family to her room and she was rescued from the flames. Nearly all the hair was burned from her head, and her neck, shoulders and parts of her body were badly blistered.

Mrs. Courtney's injuries, while quite painful, are not thought to be of a very serious character.

The authorities were notified of the deed and deputy C. J. Barnes, went out and arrested Courtney and brought him to the city the same afternoon. He was immediately tried and returned to the asylum. The young man, after being arrested, became more violent than ever and the officers experienced considerable trouble in conveying him here.

MINER KILLED.

Terrible Tragedy Took Place at Nortonville Tuesday.

Nortonville, Ky., April 16.—A tragedy was enacted here this evening when Isaac Todd, a union minor employee at the Oak Hill Coal Company's mines, was shot and killed by Roscoe Garrett, a union minor and ex-employee of the same company. Garrett fled

RIPLEY CASE.

Argument in Progress Yesterday
In Assassination Trial.

Verdict Expected Without Much Delay—Opinions Differ as to the Result.

Frankfort, Ky., April 17.—The evidence in the Ripley case closed to day, and court adjourned until to-morrow to give Judge Cantrell time to prepare his instructions and to enable the attorneys to arrange their arguments.

The defense placed Col. John B. Castleman on the stand to-day to prove that ball cartridges were a part of the necessary equipment of a military company. The rest of the evidence for the defense was not rebutted.

The Commonwealth introduced Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Matthews. They both stated that they knew enough about the killing of Goebel to acquit Caleb Powers if he should testify at his trial, and that Taylor was a coward for running away from a trial. Ripley could not remember these statements on cross examination.

The instructions of the court will be given to the jury in the morning and the argument will proceed in the order heretofore stated.

It is generally predicted here that the result of the trial will be either a verdict of acquittal or a hung jury.

GOING HIGHER.

If You Want Tobacco, Now's
Time to Buy.

Good Sales This Week And Receipts Much Heavier Than Last Report.

The tobacco market this week on prices realized and sales amounted to considerably more. Receipts were also heavier, totaling up about 400 bushels. No fine leaf was offered, but good leaf, run in prices from $8 up to $16. The demand was good for all sorts offered and bidding was spirited throughout. Lugs and common leaf were active and command outside figures on quotations of last week.

The crop of 1900 is very much shorter than was at first thought and the prospects are good for the crop to go much higher before the end of the present season for selling. Sales for the week amounted to 337 bushels and for the year 1637.

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT.

Turnpike Companies Will Probably Settled at County's Figures.

The Fiscal Court was in session again yesterday and made a final effort to reach a settlement with the turnpike companies. The aggregate offer of $68,000 will probably make the basis of a settlement.

While the deliberations were secret, it is understood that nearly all of the roads have accepted the offers made and all are expected to do so.

Bought 48 Miles.

The following pikes were purchased yesterday afternoon:

Kentucky and Tennessee, (Clarksville pike) 11 miles. . . . $ 9,000
Hopkinsville, Nashville and Bradshaw, 7½ $ 9,000
Hopkinsville, Canton and Newstead, 10½ miles. $15,000
Union Turnpike Company, 19 miles. $24,000

A total of about 48 miles for $57,000. An offer of $4,500 was made for the Summers' road of 3½ miles and $6,750 for the HopKynville & Clark's branch road of about 4 miles.

The purchase of all these pikes would cost less than $100,000.

Hygiene and Health in the Care of Lamps.

Written for HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN By Kentuckian

A well cared for lamp in a home is a treasure, our health and happiness depends quite a great deal upon them. A dim unsteady flickering light soon gives one a nervous headache—it affects the eyes—and often gives one a severe neuralgia headache. Those who live in cities and use both the electric and gas lights prefer the lamp light to read by or to study by. It is a necessity in the country home. It is a test of a good house-keeper it is said, to have her lamps in order and kept shining and bright.

The most necessary thing in securing good light from a lamp is thorough cleanliness. The best things for cleaning them is a stiff brush, plenty of clean cloths (cheese cloths are the best) a bottle of alcohol and dissolve a table-spoonful of pearline into the warm water in which you wash the tubes and all parts of the lamp in. The lamps, should be cleaned every morning and filled also. Use the best head-light oil as cheap oils are dangerous. Remove only the charred part of the wick. When the lamp-burners become clogged they may be boiled for a half hour in water to which has been added a table-spoonful of pearlne—it removes the gummy sticky substances. Soft news papers are also excellent for rubbing the grease from the outside of lamps and polishing lamp chimneys. Smoke stains may be removed by the application of vinegar and salt. It is said that if a lamp wick is soaked in vinegar and well dried before it is used it will never smoke. The lights in our homes are very important facts and we should think seriously of the happiness that occurs from the meeting of the whole family around the lamp and what good cheer it sends out.

SPREE LEADS TO REFORM.

Man Who Had a Mania for Riding Things When Drunk.

A party of former experts in such matters, says the Washington Star, were discussing, the other night, the various queer effects over-indulgence in alcoholic spirits have upon different people.

"In my case," remarked one of the past masters, "the ardent used to act in sundry peculiar ways, and one was that it would make me very crafty. Sometimes I'd wake up and be unable to find any of my portable possessions in my clothes, and only manage to locate them after a search of my room, wherever it happened to be, in all sorts of places, carefully hidden away. The money I have put away and never been able to locate would amount, I think, to a good deal, but in one instance this phase of insanity proved a life saver."

"The banner we had been carrying, for I had a clump at this time, was pretty well frayed out and our uniforms were in such a condition that there was only one pair of respectable trousers in our mutual wardrobe. When Elmer—that was my partner's name—wanted to present a good appearance those trousers would be his, and when I desired to ride out they would clad my nether limbs. One morning we both awakened—it was out in Seattle—penniless and creditless, thirsty and hungry. To alleviate our distress, at least temporarily we determined to sell that pair of trousers to a second-hand Malay around on West Street. Preparatory to sallying out to make the sale we concluded to see if anything was in the pockets. I did the searching. Side and hips developed nothing, but in the fob pocket my finger touched something."

"Here's a laundry ticket of yours, El," I remarked, satirically, pulling out the article. Then I nearly faint ed. It was a $20 bill.

"You must have cashed it the night you beat the bank," said Elmer, after our hilarious hugging match was over.

"That $20," continued the narrator, "was the turning point in our career in that section of the country. We spruced up, took the sober lay and Elmer got a good thing surveying a township and I fell into a steady newspaper job. Dickens

Achilles was invulnerable in every part of his body, save his heel. The myth runs that he was rendered invulnerable when he was dipped in the river Styx in infancy, the heel by which he was held back in the water, not submerged and therefore retained his invulnerability.

Everyone has some weak spot in his physical organization, and that weak spot is the invulnerable attacking point of the body. It does this on Nature's own plan of nourishment. Proper food properly assimilated makes a weak man strong. Proper food, the assimilation of parts, so that the strong man means strength of all parts, heart, lungs, liver, nerves, etc. "Golden Medical Discovery" puts into Nature's plan the secret by which the stomach is strengthened, the blood purified, the lungs nourished, the lungs vitalized. It contains no alcohol or other intoxicant.

It is the office of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" to build up the weak parts of the body, to strengthen the organs of the body. It does this on Nature's own plan of nourishment. Proper food properly assimilated makes a weak man strong. Proper food, the assimilation of parts, so that the strong man means strength of all parts, heart, lungs, liver, nerves, etc. "Golden Medical Discovery" puts into Nature's plan the secret by which the stomach is strengthened, the blood purified, the lungs nourished, the lungs vitalized. It contains no alcohol or other intoxicant.

Mr. R. J. McKeith, of Cadet Williams Co., S. C., writes: "I had been troubled with a sore throat for a week and could not leave my bed. I was badly crippled. Tried many doctors and two of them gave me a prescription which did not help. The pains in my back, hips and legs (and at the same time) were very bad. My appetite was very bad. I took five bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four vials of 'Reliefs' and to-day my health is good."

Second Pair of Twins.

Mrs. James Little, who lives near Atchison, Kansas, was herself a twin, and whose husband was a twin and the son of a twin, has given birth to her second pair of twins, the first pair being about eighteen months old when the second pair made their appearance.—New York Tribune.

Diminutive Twins.

Twins were born to Dr. and Mrs. McKinney, at Whiteside. They are a boy and a girl, and at birth weighed two and two and one-half pounds, respectively. They seem to be doing well, and there is every prospect that they will live and thrive. They are too small to take their natural nourishment, and have to be fed—Owensboro Inquirer.

STRICT QUARANTINE

Established Against Saddersville, Guthrie and Clarksville.

Russellville, April 15.—This city has quarantined against the towns of Saddersville, Guthrie, and Clarksville, Tenn., and the guards who have been appointed to watch the trains and all the public roads from the South and West will allow no one from these towns to enter who cannot show a health certificate.

ONE YEAR AGO.

(Janie Fraser, April 16, 1900.)

The joyous time is here again, The sky half light, half shade! Like pleasure touching hand with pain,

Our smiles with tears oft paid.

In deep woods lo! sometimes we find,

On cloudy day a rose,

The rarest and the fairest kind,

That in the land e'er grows.

We think of one beloved who died,

One year, one year ago;

More dear her mem'ry shall abide,

Than any one may know.

If she were here this April day,

The birds would sweet sing!

What care we if the sky turned gray?

Such gladness she could bring.

M. V. DUDLEY.

Louisville, Ky., April 16, 1901.

Only a brief summary of Mr. Cleveland's two recent lectures on the Venezuela Affair was given to the public,—the lectures having been especially copyrighted for appearance of the Century Magazine. Few except special students are aware of the long history of the connection of the United States with the subject. Among the interesting points brought out in the lectures, and not reported, may be mentioned Mr. Cleveland's scathing remarks on the relation of the Senate to treaties formulated by the executive branch of the government. The lectures constitute Mr. Cleveland's most important contribution to the subject.

As they left the courthouse together she said:

"Don't see how I'se goin' to raise $15 for that doo-ree."

NEAR-SIGHTED SOLDIERS.

Developed by the strain Moltke War-fare puts on the eyes.

The modern long-range military rifle is going to develop near-sightedness in soldiers if no precautions are taken, said a New Orleans physician who has seen service in the late campaign to a Times-Democrat writer. The necessity of straining the eyes upon a target a mile or more away is as certain to produce that result as two and two make four, and it is a significant fact that quite a number of men have already been relieved from duty in the Philippines on account of "defective vision." The nature of the defect is not stated, but it was evidently acquired since the soldiers entered the service, for they are subjected to a searching optical examination upon enlistment, and I hazard the guess that most of the present trouble is due to overstrain in long-distance shooting. The Japanese army surgeons have anticipated the danger, and the troops sent to China are all supplied with small, compact field glasses as part of their regular accoutrement. I read in a technical journal the other day that the glasses only cost 78 cents apiece, so they couldn't have amounted to very much, but they were better than nothing. At the same time, continued the physician, "no field glass exactly meets the difficulty. At best it merely permits the soldier to examine the target in detail before he picks up his gun, and, to draw a bead, he is absolutely compelled to do more or less squinting and straining over the sights. The proper appliance would be a very light, modified field glass that could be fastened over the eyes and used in actually taking aim. I am convinced that such a glass will be perfected and in use in the near future. It presents no great problem, and all the mountings, if desired, could be made out of pressed paper, so that the chief weight would be the glass. In fact, it need not be much heavier than a pair of old-fashioned iron-bowed spectacles and still have sufficient magnifying power to enable a soldier to sight his rifle with ease upon an object at maximum range. I admit, added the doctor, that a regiment with its glasses on would present rather a ludicrous picture, but the instrument is one of the clear necessities of present conditions, and it is bound to come."

COST OF DIVORCES.

Negro Women in a Quandary Over a Problem in Proportion.

"Where's the judge at what gives out divorces?"

A negro woman asked this of the elevator men in the courthouse, says the Kansas City Star. A negro man, her husband, was with her.

"Do you want a divorce?" inquired the elevator man.

"Yes, sah. We's done greed to git dooce'd an' Will, my man here, has done greed to give the judge power to dooce'me."

"You'll have to bring a suit first. The judge can't divorce you till you have filed a suit," the elevator man said.

"How much does that cost?"

"Well, the lawyer and all will cost about $15 or $20."

"Shaw, man, yo' suddenly don't mean it. Why, it only cost us two dollars to git mah'd. Um'm! Fifteen dollars. It suddenly do cost a lot. Say, mistah, why does it cost more to git dooce'd than to git mah'd?"

"Don't know, I'm sure, but that's a fact."

"An' can't the judge give her a divorce if I give him the power?" asked the husband.

"No; got to have a suit first."

"Um'm" they both groaned in chorus. Then the woman said:

"I'se got a right to a dooce'e. Will's bin mean as pizen to me. S'pose if I tell the judge he'll take it up?"

"Look here, woman," interrupted the husband.

"Don't you git a smart 'bout thiz yere divorce or I'll fight it. You know I'se been a good nigger to you. I done consent to give the judge power to dooce'e you 'cause you got yez mind set on cuttin' loose. But don't go to settin' up for a angel longside' of me or I'll fight it, yo."

As they left the courthouse together she said:

"Don't see how I'se goin' to raise $15 for that doo-ree."

A Flying Wedding.

A flying wedding recently took place in a Nevada town. In order to catch a train the bride and groom, minister and witnesses were all bundled into a hotel omnibus, and the ceremony was performed while the driver whipped his horses to the railway station. ACCOUNT OF

to be held on dates and at places as follows:

New Orleans, April 29 and 30.
Orford, Miss., May 28 and 29.
Gainesville, Ga., June 11 and 12.
Jackson, Miss (State) June 14 and 15.
Jackson, Tenn., June 31 and 22.

The conventions are to be held for the purpose of creating an interest in good roads as a vital aid to the upbuilding of a community, and in connection with them a practical demonstration of the great usefulness of a road to be held by the National Good Roads Association. Representatives of that association will be present with expert engineers, skilled laborers, and the Illinois Central Good Roads Train equipped with all forms of scientific road equipment, as well as a large number of men and children, with some women and children, some of whom will be installed and living comfortable to the use of the swinging cars. These

Bohemians told the police they had been camping out thus all winter. They first entered the cars on bleak night, when they were wandering homeless in the streets. They scaled the fence in search of shelter, and found the deserted wheel in the enclosure so comfortable that they remained, sleeping nights on the cushioned benches of the cars.

They first selected the lowest cars, but one day two engineers who had been sent to examine the machinery for some reason, made the great wheel describe half a turn. So the camping families, never daring to make a sign, were hoisted to the topmost position.

Since that time only one man, a former sailor could communicate with the earth.

Climbing down nights from the giddy height by means of the girders and guy ropes, he would hustle for food to keep the two tribes alive. He would steal enough charcoal from the river barges to make smokeless fires and prevent the people from freezing at night, though the least sun would make the glazed cars like hot-houses. The provisions were hoisted up with a rope.

Their curious existence lasted for two months undetected, and on February 22 a baby girl was born up there. In consideration that she is a healthy little angel the Commissary of Police released the whole party.

The wheel company not only refused to press the charge of trespassing, but offered the mother and infant a salary of $50 a month to exhibit themselves throughout the coming season in the car in which the child was born. — (Paris cable to the Chicago Chronicle.)

DIED FULLY DRESSED.

Fourteen Days in Bed Previous to Her Death.

Mrs. Marian Summers, a Warrenton county woman twenty years of age, died at her home near Sand Hill a few days ago, says the Glasgow Times. She went to bed fourteen days previous to her death and absolutely refused to be undressed. She lay in bed and died with her clothes, shoes and bonnet on.

Two Families of Tramps Have Thrilling Experience.

When the great Ferris wheel was made ready yesterday to resume business after its winter closing, two families of tramps, comprising eleven members, with some women and children, were discovered installed and living comfortable to the use of the swinging cars. These

After some pressing Mrs. Wilkins did this, but when she went down Uncle Dick promptly announced his intention of taking charge of the invalid. "I'll telephone and get our doctor over before I go," he added. "He's a good man, and I'm pretty sure he will be able to do her some good."

"But she'll have a fit of hysterics if you do that. She doesn't want any doctor."

LIFE'S CHANGEFUL SEA.

Love, we'll sail life's changeful sea,
You and I together,
Fating fortune cheerly,
Bright or stormy weather,

What though winds arise forecast
Studious winds appearing,
Sure, we'll weather safe the blast,
Love, our helmsman, steering.

What though black and troublous skies
Lie dark before us moving—
In the horizon of your eyes
Love's beacon still is glowing.

Or upon bright summer seas,
Where soft gales are sighing,
We'll weather safe the gale,
In love's light ever living.

So, we'll sail life's changeful sea,
You and I together,
Fating fortune cheerly,
Bright or stormy weather.

BERTHINE'S ILLNESS.

There was something serious the matter with Berthine. Her mother worried about it a great deal and told her brother Richard that she did not know what she was going to do about the girl. She and Berthine were on a two-days' visit to Chicago, and, of course, they stayed with Uncle Dick and Aunt Eveline.

"What seems to be the trouble?" asked Uncle Dick. "She looks well enough."

"That's what we can't tell exactly. I had Dr. Lomax see her and old Dr. Potter, and they could neither of them give me any satisfaction. Dr. Lomax said it was some sort of a nervous disorder, and he thought that a tonic and a change of air would do her good. I've been giving her iron and quinine, and I thought it might help her to bring her up here with me. She thought so, too."

"What was the other man's diagnosis?"

Mrs. Wilkins colored slightly and tapped her foot on the carpet, which was a trick of hers when she was annoyed. "Oh, I've no patience with that old bear," she said. "I told William that I wouldn't have him doctor my sick dog for me. No, he couldn't understand anything about a constitution like Berthine's. She's naturally delicate and nervous, and she needs careful and wise treatment. I try not to let her know that I think she's sick at all; I think that's about the best—how do you feel this evening, darling? You must be careful not to overexert yourself."

Berthine had just entered the room. She was about 16 years old, and, as her uncle said, she looked well enough, but she sighed wearily and passed her hand over her forehead as her mother spoke. "I think I should like to go up to my room and have a little while," she said, in a faint voice.

"Why, you poor child!" exclaimed the anxious mother. "Let me go up with you, dearest, or—"

"Wouldn't that jar you, Evvy?"

"I wish you wouldn't be so slangy, Richard," said Aunt Eveline. "I suppose the poor girl isn't to blame if she's sick."

"I suppose she isn't," grinned Uncle Dick. "I'll let moderate odds that the old doctor sized up her complaint all right, though," he added, after a moment's pause. "I don't know what he said, but it was probably the plain, blunt truth, without any offish."

They had to send up for Mrs. Wilkins at dinner time, and Mrs. Wilkins sent down word that she hoped they would excuse her, but she had to stay with poor Berthine, who had one of her nervous attacks. Aunt Eveline went up and found her holding Berthine's hand and trying to bathe the interesting patient's head with a cool, damp cloth.

"She can't bear to have me leave her," said Mrs. Wilkins. "Just see how she twitches and how her eyes roll. She says she wants to scream and go out and run up and down the street as hard as she can bear. I think I had better have a doctor in to see her, Eveline."

There came a sharp protest from the bed. "I don't want any old doctors," said Berthine. "If you bring one here it will drive me frantic. Just stay here and hold my hand."

"But you've got to eat something," said Aunt Eveline. "Here, you go downstairs and eat your dinner and I'll stay with her."

After some pressing Mrs. Wilkins did this, but when she went down Uncle Dick promptly announced his intention of taking charge of the invalid. "I'll telephone and get our doctor over before I go," he added. "He's a good man, and I'm pretty sure he will be able to do her some good."

"But she'll have a fit of hysterics if you do that. She doesn't want any doctor."

"Nonsense!" said Uncle Dick, firmly, going over to the telephone. "What did you come up here for? I don't want you," said Berthine, languidly, when her aunt had left the room.

Uncle Dick sat down very deliberately by the bedside, and, adjusting his eyeglasses, smiled amiably at his niece.

"Joy seems to be having a spell of the jerks," he said, presently. "I'm going to cure you. I'm not going to hold your hand, either, or put cracked ice on your fevered brow. I'm just going to indulge you. If you want to yelp, you've got my permission to raise the roof, if you can, and if you want to sprint up and down the avenue for awhile I'll go along and pace you. I want you to feel at home."

"Where's mother? Send her to me."

"I've sent her off by the evening train to Buffalo. You're going to stay with your old uncle and be his girl."

"I think you are horrid. I wish you'd go away."

"You make me feel bad when you talk like that. What's your game, Berthine?"

The girl turned her head for an instant and looked at her self-constituted nurse. Just for an instant, and then Uncle Dick thought he heard a faint giggle. He repeated his question in a cheerful, persuasive way.

"I don't know what you mean," she said, when he asked her the third time.

"Oh, yes, you do. Now, don't you think that you ought to be ashamed of yourself?"

The response to this was a sob, followed by another, and another, in increasing violence.

Her uncle got up and seized the water pitcher and a large sponge. Saturating the sponge, he squeezed it out on the girl's face, whereupon she gave a very genuine scream and bounced off the bed.

"Better already," commented Uncle Dick. "Nothing like a cold, wet sponge in cases of this kind. Do you think I'll get some more, Berthine? Or shall I get you a towel?"

Berthine held out her hand for the towel.

"Now, then," continued Uncle Dick, in a confidential tone. "I'm dead on to you, my dear, but I don't see any reason why we shouldn't come to an understanding. Don't look sulky, Berthine; I'm your friend, and I'm not going to give you away if you'll be good; but you want to get down to business. You are wasting altogether too much time on preliminaries. There's going to be a doctor here in about ten minutes. I shall see him first. What do you want me to tell him to prescribe for you?"

He placed his hands on his knees and regarded her smilingly. She looked at him through half-closed eyes with an expression at first stubborn and then relaxing into a half-smile.

"I want a bicycle while we are up here, and I'm going to have it," she said.

In effect that was what the doctor prescribed for her after he had felt her pulse and looked at her tongue. But she was feeling very much better even then.

Aunt Eveline talked the matter over with her husband that night after their relatives had gone to bed. "I was really afraid that the poor girl was going to have a serious illness," she said. "I think, though, that there's a great deal in the influence of a calm and strong personality over anyone of her temperament. The half hour that you were with her seemed to have a wonderful effect."

"I guess it did," said Uncle Dick. "I believe thoroughly in the theory of vibrations."

"Modified by pneumatic tires," said Uncle Dick, enigmatically. "I should like to have somebody tell me why it is that a woman takes such great joy in the exercise of—well, diplomacy, to get something that she might have for the asking. Girls are harder to understand than women, too, I believe. I know I can't understand them. I can make a successful guess once in awhile, though," he added, with conscious pride.

"What on earth are you talking about?" asked Aunt Eveline.—Chicago Record-Herald.

There died in Clarksville Monday night an aged negress, who often boasted that she had killed the pony many a time for Gen. Washington and his troops in Virginia." Rachel Duke, to the best knowledge of those acquainted with her life, could have been not less than 126 years old. She was born when her mother was but little over 13 years of age. She was remarkably active and retained her faculties almost to the very last. She was a slave of the Duke family, of Virginia, and came to Tennessee with a Miss Duke, who became the second wife of the late W. D. Moss, who for many years lived not far from Lafayette.

FARM WORK

Progressing Most Favorably Throughout Christian County.

All kinds of farm work is progressing most favorably throughout this county. Owing to good weather which generally prevailed during the winter months and early spring, the farmers of this section are at least a month in advance with their work. Considerable corn has been planted and large quantities of corn land is broken, and is ready for planting. Gardens were planted out some time ago, and are several weeks ahead of the usual season. Good rains have fallen, which were needed on the gardens, and to put the ground in better condition for plowing. The prospects for a good crop this year are better at this season than at the same time in a number of years.

The prices of admission are: children 25 cents, adults 35 cents, and when the magnitude and artistic worth of the show is taken into consideration it will easily be seen that the prices of admission are decidedly reasonable.

FLAG WITH A HISTORY.

Condensed Account of the First Element of the Confederate States of North America.

The first flag raised as an emblem of the confederacy has had an interesting history. It was first used in South Carolina, the mother state in the upper left corner, and the colors are white.

It was made by the ladies of Charleston, S. C., on the eve of their state's secession, December 20, 1860. The next day it was hoisted over the city customhouse.

It was never hoisted on land, but it was flown over the customhouse. Shortly afterwards the Dixie, a small privateer and blockade runner, started on its depredations, and as the young confederacy had adopted no official banner

MEDDLING ELDERS.

Spoiled a Pretty Incident in a Young Couple's Love-Making.

Just as pretty a case of youthful idyllic love as you would want to see has suffered a rude shock from the stupid intervention of some meddling elders who long ago have probably forgotten whatever romance may once have blessed their lives. It is not quite a week ago that a certain pretty West Side girl planned to go to Chicago for a day's shopping, and the young man who was wasting most of his slender salary in violet and candy these days begged for the happy privilege of riding as far as Allis station with her. The girl has a father who finds his chief joy in life in making it his special business to smooth out the road so that so far as it lies with him it shall be one of roses. The morning she was to go to Chicago, not being able to escort her to the station himself, he sent a cab and then went ahead to tell the conductor to keep a kindly eye on his beloved child. The conductor, who knew the pretty girl by sight, promised to do this for the best of his ability and the father went to his work feeling reasonably secure. Less than an hour afterwards he was summoned to the telephone. In an agitated voice the conductor told him that his daughter had been attempting to elope, but was held at Allis awaiting his orders. The father drove maddly to the South side station, horrified and grieved. There, the girl was to go to Chicago, not being able to escort her to the station himself, he sent a cab and then went ahead to tell the conductor to keep a kindly eye on his beloved child. It will stop any pain caused by indigestion; it cures sick headache by attacking the cause of the complaint and aids you to digest your food no matter what you eat. Sold by C. K. Wylie.

THE CENTURY COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

HON. PARIS GIBSON.
(New United States Senator from the State of Montana.)

W. Eastman, he built the Catawba flour mill, the first in the city, and operated the North Star woolen mill. He met with reverses during the panic of 1873, and in 1879 removed to Fort Benton, Mont., where he engaged in sheep raising. He was among the first that organized to develop the industry, and has continued the business with profit. In 1882 he visited the falls of the Missouri river, and on examining the resources of the surrounding country, was impressed with the advantages of the place as a site for a city, and secured the services of coal, and extent of agricultural and grazing lands. With James J. Hill, of St. Paul, he acquired title to the town site and coal lands, and in 1884 founded a town and named it Great Falls. By the completion of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad, to which he was a director, a large sum was given to the town, which increased to a city of 18,000 inhabitants. To Mr. Gibson is due its splendid public park system, the first in the north west. He was organizer of the Great Falls Water Power and Town Site Company, and a director in the support of every enterprise in the city. He has much of his wealth invested in the gold, silver, iron and coal industries of the surrounding region.

He was a delegate to the Montana constitutional convention in 1889, and was senator from Cascade county to the first legislature, where he advocated the consolidation of all state institutions for liberal education under the name of the University of Montana.

ALL DID WELL.

"She Stoops to Conquer," Played by Local Talent.

Fine Audience Greeted The Performance by The Alumnae Society.

Goldsmith's Comedy "She Stoops to Conquer" was played Monday night at the Opera House by local talent in a manner that thoroughly pleased a large and highly appreciative audience. The Opera House was crowded with representatives of the city's most cultivated and intelligent people.

All of the characters were so well sustained that it would not be fair to any of them to single out others for special mention. From start to finish the play moved through five acts without a hitch or break and much of the acting would have done credit to professionals. Miss Nora Anderson as Kate Hardcastle and Miss Katie Manson as Constance Neville, and Mr. Clifton Long as Young Marlow and Mr. Duke Nelson as George Hastings were the quartette upon whom devolved the responsibility of making the frequent love-making scenes a success. The charming acting of the young ladies and the self-possession and versatility displayed by their lovers showed that though new to the stage they were not altogether without experience somewhere in the difficult roles assumed.

George Howell's "Tony Lumpkin" thoroughly pleased the crowd and brought out the humor of the play in a most creditable manner. Wallace Kelly as Squire Hardcastle did some exceedingly clever work and added to his popularity attained heretofore on the local stage.

Merrie Bacon in a double role did well in both parts and Lewis Elgin's Digory kept the audience laughing. Miss Lalla Dennis made a most attractive Maid, playing well in the minor part.

Mrs. Walter Wilson as Mrs. Hardcastle interpreted her part in a most pleasing manner.

John Gunn, Lewis Payne, Ellis McKeithen, Lawson Flack, Jim Bramham and Ben Winfree, as revelers and associates of the mischievous Tony Lumpkin, made the best of their opportunities.

The net proceeds were $170, which will go to the Public School Alumni Society.

Cadet James Anderson, of Nashville, Tenn., a student in South Kentucky College, and a sergeant in the military department, took membership in Co. His triumph was achieved before he had been a member of the company two hours and his friends are very justly proud of his success, which speaks much for the efficiency of the military department of S. K. C. under the direction of Capt. J. B. Allan.
